PE... through the eyes of Mrs Claw

Last month found Shirley, Leon and Mrs Claw doing a road trip to Humansdorp. This alone would probably get some people thinking because who in their right minds would do a road trip to all places Humansdorp unless they were just swinging through en route to the one and only fabulous St Francis??? Well those three would! The reason being? They were off to apply for their new SA ID card which as pensioners they get for free!! Where else on the planet could you get anything for free????

As Shil had to complete the Parken in PE first, they hit the road at approximately 10 am. The road trip was reasonably comfortable and without incident but in hindsight, Mrs Claw would have preferred to pack a basket of padkos for the trip but more about that later.

In the days before the ride, Mrs Claw cogitates fondly on many road trips taken with family and the scrumptious padkos her beloved mother used to pack. Cold pork sausages, cold chicken, hardboiled eggs (which had a smell or their own) delish sandwiches and not forgetting the good old flask of coffee to which was added ideal milk and sugar.

What a treat!! However, she digresses as the famous food writer the late Mr Grey would have said.

On arrival in the dop, they quickly found the Home Affairs Department which has a charm of its own which includes the fantastic ladies who man the whole operation. Rose, an absolute gem who reminded Mrs Claw a nanny she had in the year dot was on the ball and so flipping proficient on the computer it was hard to get one's head around it. LOL One was issued with a number on arrival and everything was conducted in an extremely friendly and orderly fashion. Mrs Claw was asked for her divorce certificate at the first "station". Well really, who keeps bits of paper for thirty odd years?? When she voiced this, she was told she must still be married!! Well that was food for thought, maybe she could apply for maintenance???? LOL She was instructed in the nicest way possible to please bring said document when she is asked to return to collect her new card!

On to the photo shoot - "Carole you are not" called the lady who it must be said took a fab shot of Mrs C for her new and probably final id doc. Those pics can really be quite dreary at times but this is in brilliant colour and looks a bit photo shopped if the truth be known but then who gives a fig? Not Mrs C.

They were in and out photos and finger prints taken and after finalising the end process for three of them in just over an hour. Not too shabby eh?? Before the car was even mobile they each received an sms confirming their applications... WOW! Next it was on the Chameleon for lunch. What a disappointment (hence the remarks about pedos). The ambience is
