

Williams' Hunt 'Rainmakers' in Humansdorp help farmers

The drought in South Africa has made clean water a luxury

And to help in some way to alleviate the plight of farmers in Kougga and surrounding areas who need water Williams Hunt has decided to supply water for them and have now called themselves the m'Rainmakers'. They will donate up to 300 litres of clean bottled drinking water (in 5L containers or bigger) for each vehicle purchased through them to those in need in the Kougga and surrounding areas

They also call on all local small, medium and large businesses to become rainmakers as well.

"Not only will it be good for business but they will also be giving back to the community to make Kougga a far better place," says Gerhard Gobey of Williams Hunt Humansdorp. "We also believe that by having clean water to drink one can sustain a healthier lifestyle and combat diseases especially with winter approaching."

"It is hoped we will start a trend that will benefit everyone."

Recently I wrote an article that several Kougga businesses have responded to the plight of needy drought-stricken farmers who faced complete failure of crops and the selling off of livestock. The businesses have sent containers of water plus bales of fodder for livestock to farmers in the worst affected areas of the Free State and Tshwane.

Despite some much need relief for farmers a following rainfalls (and some floods in a few areas), it has been reported that the rains were not heavy enough to replenish water reserves in some of the driest parts. And the public is asked to continue to assist by providing empty water bottles and containers.

It was also reported by Gift of the Givers, an aid organisation that partnered with the government and business to supply bottled and tanked water to several parts of the Free

State, that despite daily arrivals of 260 000 litres of water, several areas remained in desperate need of assistance.

Agri Tsitsikamma-East agricultural association between the Krom River and Palmietvlief and with members in Mondplaa, Humansdorp and the Tsitsikamma, decided in November last year to donate food for Free State farmers in need. The association made contact with Van Staden's Farmers' Association.

:Leandrie - New Office Administrator at Pam Golding

Pam Golding Properties has appointed Leandrie Terblanche, to its team from the beginning of this month of March.

She is the new Office Administrator, managing the office and assisting the four agents. "I am enjoying the challenge, but still have much to learn," she says.

Leandrie was born and raised in Humansdorp and has two brothers. She matriculated in 2007 at Nico Malan High School, where she met her high school sweetheart, Mome Terblanche, who is now her husband. The couple have a four month-old baby boy and she is most fortunate to have her parents and in-laws living close by.

She describes herself as being a positive person and says there are many things she likes to do, see and experience. She also says she is passionate, optimistic and dedicated with a great amount of perseverance, among other strong characteristics.

As for hobbies she says she is keen on sports and likes to play netball, do shopping and listen to music. Her favourite time of the year is summer and being on the beach with sand between her toes.
